We want to give our children
the best parents they could ever have!

Few things are more important than the relationship with our children. Today we know that strong bonds between children and parents are the best foundation for a peaceful childhood and for growing up to be independent individuals as adults. This is what ABC group sessions are all about.

We are all experts at parenthood

Actually, we don't need research to convince us that good relationships with our children are important. We already know that. What is not always so obvious is how to achieve them. Everyday situations in which relationships are put to the test are probably familiar to most parents. How do we create peace and harmony around the dinner table? How do we avoid stressful situations? How can we prevent conflicts? How do we gain more time for joyful interaction with our children?

One thing is for sure. These questions are not unique to any parent.

Worthwhile hours

ABC consists of four group sessions, each with a unique theme.

The group sessions are led by trained group leaders and each group has a maximum of 10 participants. All of them are parents of children aged 3-12. At the sessions, we share each other's experiences and discover what research has to say. We take away the lessons we learn and the insights we gain and practice at home, between the session.

This is ABC - for All Beloved Children

ABC is a programme of group sessions for all parents of children aged 3-12. The programme was developed on behalf of the Swedish Public Health Agency and is intended to strengthen the parent/child relationship. The contents are based on research on parenthood and child development and the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.

ABC has been evaluated by Karolinska Institutet. The results show that ABC has positive effects on perceived parental competence and parents' perceptions of children's health and development.
